Further information

The products above have been prepared from sterilized vaccines by the traditional process of sequential dilution and succussion employed in homoeopathic manufacture. They are designed to be administered by mouth rather than by injection. Since the micro doses of the remedy are embedded on the tablet surface you are advised not to handle them.

To administer a dose simply tip the tablet into the cap of the vial and from there onto your pet's tongue. If necessary crush a tablet between two clean spoons and dissolve the powder in water. This can then be syringed into the mouth or deposited in the water bowl.

Homeopathic
Prevention for Cats & Dogs

We are often asked for an alternative to the conventional vaccinations for dogs and cats. The following information may be helpful.

Orthodox Prevention

Your local veterinary clinic will advise on this.

Homoeopathic Preventative

Treatment

Although the following remedies have been used successfully for many years they have not been tested in clinical trials like conventional vaccines. We are therefore unable to make claims as to their efficacy.

If your animals are under the care of a homoeopathic vet you may well have been advised to administer one of the following regimes: -
